

As everyone is preparing to support students from a distance, I wanted to share a few resources that you may find helpful. If you need any physical items in our collection, let us know and we can make arrangements to get the materials to you. The library is also happy to support you however we can virtually.

LibGuides: <https://mayvillestate.edu/student-resources/library/resources-division/>

Libguides is a system to make online research guides. In the library world we use them to make guides for students in researching different topics. Currently, the library has one for many of the different academic disciplines at MSU. As requested, we can add pages in these guides for specific assignments requiring research guidance. This is an online application we pay for and could be useful for different divisions or departments if you want to share links to a large amount of resources with students, faculty or staff. There are lots of different options for who can view the guides. If you are interested in learning more, contact me and we can set up a time to meet virtually so I can show you some of the options.

Faculty Select has been shared before but as a reminder, it is a database that you can use to find OER books and DRM-Free ebooks. DRM-Free ebooks allow multiple users at once. Especially with our temporary all online learning environment, the library can purchase and have the book available to you and your students within a few days.

Yuja Library Videos in the All Instructors Folder:

Some of our on-campus students may not be used to accessing the library's databases off-campus. To assist, I created an Overview of the Library Website video that will remind students how to access materials off-campus. It is available in the All Instructors Folder of Yuja and you should be able to share it with your particular course.
